[Sports officials in Poland sain Monday that Soviet bloc nations are preparing to sponsor sports events in various countries to substitute for the Olympics. A Polish official said alternate sports events would not be held at the same time as the Los Angeles games to avoid conflicts with the Olympic charter, which specifically forbids "c. unier-games."

The statement by Mr. Gramov, who holds the mak of cabinet member and who is also chairman of the Soviet national Olympic committee, appeared to end all hopes that the Soviet Union and its allies will participate in the games.

Mr. Gramov blamed the Reagan administration for Moscow's decision to withdraw from the Olympics, saying Mr. Reagan's anti-Soviet crusade had produced a climate of bysteria in the United States and created conditions in which anti-communist groups

4 Guerrillas Are Killed in Raid On South African Oil Refinery

DURBAN, South Africa -Four guerrillas fired rockets at an oil refinery, then led police on a car hase through a waterfront industrial area before police killed all four early Monday in a shootout at a construction yard.

IG Metall Strikes Car Suppliers In Stuttgart

STUTTGART - About 13,000 netalworkers went on strike in the ndustrial area around Stuttgart Monday and their union announced that it would widen the walkout to Frankfurt next week, a move that could force a shutdown of West Germany's automotive in-

The strike by IG Metall, West Germany's biggest union, was called in support of its demand for a 35-hour workweek. Union offi-cials said Monday's walkout affect-ed about 14 factories near here, many involved in manufacturing car components, the first such strike in West Germany since 1978. Union officials said all members obeyed the strike order and picketing proceeded without incident.

Employers, meanwhile, rejected an appeal by the union's chairman, Hans Mayr, to resume bargaining.
They have referred to discuss any cut in the standard 40-hour week.

Escalation of the dispute trig-gered a steep slide in share prices on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange. Robert Bosch, one of the biggest European manufacturers of car batteries, ignition systems and elec-trical equipment, headed the list of Monday's strike targets. Others in-cluded West Germany's two biggest makers of pistons. Kolbensch-midt and Mahle. The Munich-based car maker BMW said Monday it would have

EC Ministers Balk at Seeking Major Loan

BRUSSELS — Enropean Community govern-ments refused Monday to be rushed into arranging a loan for their troubled trading bloc and called on the European Commission to find new savings to cut this year's budget deficit. With receding prospects of an early end to the year-old cash crisis, community foreign ministers demanded a rigorous review of spending plans before consideration of the commission's request for a $2-billion loan, officials said. Minister of External Relations Claude Cheysson of France, who chaired a meeting of the ministers here, ordered the commission to submit monthly financial reports to the ministers.

Budget Commissioner Christopher Tugendhat warned the ministers that the community would run out of cash by the end of October. The minis-ters responded by challenging the commission's $2.25-billion estimate of this year's cash shortfall.

"Governments are simply not able to continue pouring money into the community at a time of continued constraints on public spending in mem-ber states," a diplomat said.

Several ministers expressed disquiet with the loan idea as a solution to meet immediate cash needs, diplomats said. The West German foreign minister, Hans-Dietrich Genscher, rejected the idea, saying his country found it legally dubious.

Police on Monday would say only that Rabbi Levinger, 48, a founder of the Gush Emunim ultranationalist movement, was arrested late Sunday night.

Cuba's Grenada Envoys Fall Into Obscurity

Havana Blames Its Reversal on Island On Shoddy Diplomatic Reporting

By Joseph B. Treaster New York Times Service

HAVANA - The two senior Cuban officials in Grenada at the time of the U.S.-led invasion of the island last fall have quietly dropped out of sight and are apparently in disgrace, Western diplomats here say. Neither Julian Torres Rizo, the Cuban ambassador to Grenada at the time, nor Colonel Pedro Tortolo Comas, who was sent to Grenada shortly before the invasion to shore up the defenses of the nearly 800 Cubans who were building an sirfield on the island, have been seen at official functions in months, the diplomats say.

Middle-level Cuban officials said they did not know where the two men were oow and requests to talk with senior Cuban officials

The diplomats discount rumors that Mr. Torres Rizo and Mr. Tortolo are under house arrest, Both have apparently been assigned to obscure posts. One diplomat said he had heard that Mr. Tortolo had been made deputy director of a military school in the interior of Cuba, while Mr. Torres Rizo was now working at a "very technical" position in the Foreign Ministry.

By some accounts, Grenada, under the leadership of Prime Minis-ter Maurice Bishop, had become almost a Cuban surrogate, with Mr. Torres Rizo being consulted on most important decisions.

But in mid-September last year, as the central committee of the ruiing New Jewel Movement forced Mr. Bishop to share power with his deputy prime minister, Bernard Coard, something began to 20 Coard, something began to go wrong with Cuba's diplomatic reporting system.

President Castro later told a reporter that Cuba's representatives in Grenada had absolutely no idea what was happening."

Some Western diplomats say they find it difficult to believe that the Cuhan ambassador was unaware of developments in so tiny a country as Grenada, which has a population of only about 100,000, and where politics are the preserve of a small clite.

The diplomats suggest that Mr. Torres Rizo might have been reluctant to be the bearer of bad news to President Castro about the Cuban leader's close friend, Mr. Bishop.

Alternatively, the ambassador might have been reporting accurately and in full detail, but the disappointing developments were not being imparted to Mr. Castro by officials in Cuba who either doubted the news or sought to shield their president from it.

Shortly before his death, Mr. Bishop met with Mr. Castro in Cuba and indicated that there were growing political problems in Grenada, according to a diplomat, citing an official who attended the

Both officials were at the airfield when U.S. paratroopers began landing. Following Mr. Castro's or-ders for the Cubens to defend their positions to the end, Mr. Diaz stood firm and was killed. Mr. Tortolo, however, fled to the safety of the Soviet Embassy.

After the invasion, Suriname, which had become an ally to Cuba in 1980 when Lieutentant Colonel Desi Bouterse seized power, canceled all its agreements with Cuba and asked it to recall its ambassa-dor, Mr. Cardenas.

Cuba responded by bringing home all of its diplomats in Suriname and stopped short of formally breaking relations.

For Duarte, a Question of Balance He Faces Job of Advancing Democracy, Calming Fears

By Lydia Chavez

New York Times Service SAN SALVADOR — As president of El Salvador, José Napoleón Duarte will have to balance his own ideas of democracy and increasing the power of the civilian govern-ment with the task of calming suspicions held by some private citi-zens and the armed forces that such pursuits will rob them of wealth and power.

To many Americans, Mr. Duarte s known as a moderate political leader. Within the context of U.S. politics he would be considered

However, in El Salvador, he has been an iconoclastic political lead-er who for decades has fought against the traditional power of the armed forces and the landed class.

While many Americans perceive the battle as one necessary to establish a democratic state, the tradi-tional wielders of power in El Sal-vador suspect that it could lead to socialism or even to communism.

Mr. Duatte's political history has made him many enemies. As the head of the military-civilian junta that governed El Salvador from 1980 to 1982, he is associated with the most radical land-redistribution program in Latin America, the nationalization of the banks and the country's worst two years

To the far rightists, Mr. Duarte is a rebel, a man intent on destroying a system that for so long worked to their advantage. But even middle-class and lower-class Salvadorans are leery of him — the former be-cause they are afraid of losing what little they have, the latter because they are afraid of the violence that the traditional rulers in El Salvador will share power with a civilian

While the examples usually given to illustrate Mr. Duarte's more liberal tendencies are generally taken from 1980 to 1982, his reputation as a political rebel began during his three successive terms as mayor of San Salvador.

It is during these years in the 1960s that he adopted the theory of "communitarism." The doctrine essentially seeks to decentralize power held by a few authorities and

The traditional rulers were threated because decision-making power was being taken out of their hands. But many Salvadorans who had never held power also were jeopardized because to ask for a role in government became tantamount to putting their lives in dan-

The far right's characterization of Mr. Duarte as a U.S. pupper also plays on the distrust upper-class Salvadorans have of the United States and doubts about Washing-ton's willingness to support the

This distrust stems primarily from the economic tailspin that be-gan in El Salvador after the United States insisted on economic reforms after the 1979 coup.

Mr. Duarte believed and acted on those promises, but the economic aid that was expected never arrived. At the same time, the world prices for coffee and other Salvadoran commodities began to fall in 1980, and not enough U.S. aid was forthcoming to prevent the reces-sion that has left 40 percent of the people jobless.

Thousands of Libyans rallied in Tripoli to celebrate Colonel Moamer Qadhafi's escape from an attempted assassination. The Libyan leader himself was absent from the demonstration.

Political, Security Reasons Are Seen In Qadhafi's Failure to Attend Rally

By Jonathan C. Randal

Washington Post Service TRIPOLI. Lihya - Colonel Moamer Qadhafi, the Libyan leader, failed to show up at a mass rally celebrating his escape from an assassination attempt last week. Speculation attributed his decision to both security and political considerations.

The rally on Sunday at Green Square near the Mediterranean waterfrant passed noisily, but without what Colonel Qadhafi's aides earlier had suggested would be an appearance followed by demonstrations autside the British and Tunisian emoassies.

At the rally, attended by as many as 20,000, predominantly young people, Britain, Tunisia, the United States and Sudan again were de-nounced for their alleged roles in the still-mysterious gun hattle last last year after escaping capture for Tuesday less than a male from Colonel Qadhafi's army barracks

Once before, in 1981, Colonel Qadhafi confounded his critics by withdrawing from Chad just when they were convinced he had bogged his army down irretrievable in a far

Conflict Resolution Is Mushrooming As Academic Discipline in the U.S.

By Carol Krucoff Washington Post Service

WASHINGTON - "We're going to start throwing bodies out the window," the man in the ski mask shouted into the intercom, pushing the amhassador to his knees and putting a gun to his bead. "Someone's going 10 die."

On the other end of the line, the negotiator loosened his tie and took a deep breath. In the 20 minutes since a band of terrorists called to say they had taken the ambassador and his family hostage, the official had tried several tactics to defuse the situation.

Now he tried a stalling maneuver, saying soothingly into the in-tercom: "Are you comfortable! Can we get you anything to eat or "That's it!" the terrorist yelled to a companion holding a gun on the ambassador's wife. "We're going to blow her head off!" A shot exploded. The ambassador's wife slumped over.

"That was quick." said Bryant Wedge, a social psychiatrist to a group of graduate students watching a videotape of the "Hostage Negotiation Role-Play" that they had enacted earlier in the course.

"John. I think it would have been better to repeat their demands back to them at that point." Mr. Wedge said to the retired U.S. Navy cantain who had portrayed the State Department negotiator. "But you had the right idea - keep them talking. As long as they're talking they don't do anything." Mock mediations between warring factions — be they bosses and workers, environmentalists and industrialists or husbands and wives -are a crucial part of the nation's first master's degree program in conflict intervention.

"We train military people by the tens of thousands and diplomats by the thousands," said Mr. Wedge. founder and director of George Mason University's Center for Conflict Resolution in Fairfax, Virginia. "Now we're finally teaching people how to wage peace."

Conflict resolution is one of the fastest-growing academic disci-plines in the United States, with hundreds of workshops springing up around the country for lawyers. therapists, social workers and oth-

We have come to realize," Mr. Wedge said, "that, in virtually all disputes, resolutions work best when people participate in the decisions that will affect them. The mediator does not hand down a judgment. He or she helps the disputing parties solve the problem themscives.

The study of conflict and how it is caused, prevented, managed and last week of two Libyans appre- resolved began in academic circles mushroomed in recent years with the fear that with nuclear weapons the traditional method of settling disputes - slugging it out - may leave neither victors nor spoils.

Mr. Wedge's efforts began in 1959 when he left Yale University. where he was chief psychiatrist at the department of university health, to accept an Eisenhower Exchange Fellowship. On a tour of 15 countries, he was invited to 3 party where officials of a U.S.-Soviet university exchange program were screaming at each other.

"They were accusing each other of bad faith and sabotage." Mr. Wedge recalled, "when it was just a bloody misunderstanding." He stepped in to help settle the dispute and realized "we like to think that those in high places know what they're doing and the world is safe. But from this close encounter I wasn't so sure.'

The traditional tendency to 'Call out the Marines' when conflict threatens to get nasty can leave you with a lot of dead marines. Mr. Wedge said. "But a skilled negotiator can jurn a win-lose situation into a win-win situation. A true, honest broker can do things all the diplomacy and gunboat stuff can't touch."

George Mason's program is a prototype for the Nauonal Peace Academy, the subject of a bill cosponsored by 54 U.S. senators and 169 U.S. representatives. The U.S. Academy of Peace Act would authorize $23.5 million to train Americans and leaders of other nations in "the art of conflict resolution without resort to violence."

But aides to Senator Howard H. Baker Jr., Republican of Tennessee, said be had no plans to schedule the bill, largely, its proponents sert, because it is opposed by the hire House.

The academy is "a new goody-tao-shoes boundoggle" proposed by the "Jane Fondas of the Senate." said Edwin Feulner, president of the Heritage Foundation, a conservative research organization. "It would have you believe a few courses in international hugging and kissing will turn even Yasser Arafat into a gentle little pussycat."

Those in favor of the bill counter that U.S. taxpayers support four military academies and five war colleges and contend that State Department opposition is prompted by fear of competition.

The Threat to Sakharov

There is reason to suspect that at this moment the Soviet government is coolly and deliberately ensuring a mounting threat to the life of one of the great men of the 20th century. the physicist and peace activist Andrei Sakharoy. The 62-year-old dissident is known to have begun a hunger strike more than a week ago at Gorki, where he lives in internal exile. His purpose was to mobilize international opinion to induce the Kremlin authorities to allow his wife. Yelena Bonner, to travel abroad briefly for medical and family purposes.

Mrs. Bonner herself has since been confined to Gorki - and reportedly has also begun a hunger strike -- so there is no reliable way for outsiders to keep track of the condition of her husband. But given the intense interest in Mr. Sakharov, it is hard to believe that the authorities would maintain the secrecy over Gorki if the threat to his life had been lifted.

Soviet officials profess outrage at the continued flow of foreign concern for one of their citizens. They find such concern provocative and essentially political in its character. In a sense the concern is disproportionate, but there is a reason: The Sakharovs and a few others have become in Western opinion the surrogates for all the brave individuals, known and unknown, who dare to assert the calls of conscience against the whims of Soviet power.

What the Kremlin has been doing to the Sakharovs is pure malice and vindictiveness the policy of a petty, frightened power lacking in both decency and self-confidence. What imperatives of high policy require an ill woman to be vilified, harassed by the KGB and now denied the medical treatment and family companionship of her choice? What perverse considerations of national pride compel the Kremlin to make an example of its abuse of a Nobel peace laureate?

We observed last week that the moment of the Sakharovs' evident renewed distress was scarcely the time for America's National Academy of Sciences to resume the scientific exchanges it had cut off as a protest over mistreatment of its distinguished foreign asso-ciate. The academy's president, Frank Press, responded by saying, among other things, that exchange channels are needed "to communicate humanitarian concerns."

Humanitarian concerns do need to be communicated - by the Soviet authorities. They need to stop their sickening harassment of the Sakharovs and to re-establish the couple's link with the outside world. The proper humanitarian contribution of American scientists is to suspend their exchange plans until the welfare of the Sakharovs is no longer in doubt.

Aid as Riot Insurance

Those food riots that rattled the Dominican Republic have also rattled Washington. Every-body concedes that more should have been done to bolster a democratic government be-fore food prices jumped up in compliance with austerity terms for an IMF loan. The State Department has now scraped up $15 million in additional credits and Congress is considering $75 million more to aid. Why was this help not extended before Santo Domingo was shaken by the worst violence in e generation? One explanation is that foreign aid is so tangled in restrictions that it takes the skills of a safecracker to find and extract funds from various budgets. When the Dominican president, Salvador Jorge Blanco, visited Washington in April, the State Department scoured the cupboard for additional aid. It came up with $23.5 million in new aid — a feat we failed to acknowledge in an earlier comment (IHT, May 2) — bringing total aid to $133.5 million. But even that was well below the margin of safety,

What especially might have beloed him was not available: more food aid in the form of low-cost wheat, rice and corn. Because of worldwide food shortages, the bin was empty. Although Congress wants to enlarge this $791million program by $175 million, passage has been snagged by extraneous amendments.

Still, every time the Reagan administration puts a high priority on an aid request, it somehow manages to find the money. When Grenada needed help, an extra $40 million was drawn from unused funds earmarked for Lebanon. When Congress stalled on aid to El Salvador, President Reagan announced his readiness to reach into contingency funds to keep the money flowing.

The Dominican Republic seemed stable, so its request did not reach the priority list. Emergency aid is viewed as disaster relief, not riot insurance. Thus, warnings that IMF conditions would cause unrest were ignored until they were proved correct. Until e better way is found to manage these adjustment loans, the same cycle will surely be repeated. Perhaps the Dominican lesson will add poignance and per-suasiveness when hard-pressed aid officials plead for disaster insurance.

Other Opinion

Voting No on Salvador Violence

The people of El Salvador have paid for the country's ongoing civil war — a war that, without fomentation by the Soviet Union, Cuba and Nicaragna, would have flickered out long ago - with some 50,000 lives and the collapse of a promising economy. Amid this shattering crisis and in the face of threats and terror from left and right a majority of the electors have opted determinedly for democracy. They have had enough of violence and hope desperately for a middle way that will enable the country to break out of its blooddrenched stalemate.

- The Neue Zürcher Zeitung (Zurich).

High Stakes in the Philippines

The National Assembly election in the Philippines will be a test, but by no means a final one, of whether it is possible to restore healthy democracy to this nation torn by dissension and troubled by critical economic problems. There seems to be little doubt that President Marcos's New Society Movement will win a very comfortable majority. What is working in his favor is the evaporation of the unity among opposition parties that followed the assassination of the opposition leader Benigno Aquino.

Fair elections are necessary to encourage the opposition to put its faith in the democratic process. If the Filipinos are angered by what they view as another rigged election, they may be inclined to seek violent means to achieve their political objectives.

It is hoped that the National Assembly election will be conducted in a blameless fashion and thus truly become the first major move toward restoring full democracy. This would be in the best interests of the Filipino people. - The Japan Times (Tokyo).

Time for Democratic Unity

For Walter Mondale it is all over bar the doubting. The doubting is whether he can beat Ronald Reagan in November. But that is a problem for later. For now he can be satisfied that, despite a late flourish by Gary Hart in Indiana and Ohio, the Democratic nomination seems to be his. With just half a dozen primary elections to go, it would take an earthquake or a robbery to deny him the nomination. So it is time for all good Democrats to sink their differences and coalesce behind Mr. Mondale in order to defeat the wicked Mr. Reagan in the autumn.

Getting [the Rev. Jesse] Jackson and his followers through the revolving door of the Democratic Party without at the same time expelling a lot of others is going to be a struggle. It may prove impossible this year. But the task is worth attempting.

Mr. Jackson has certainly brought many blacks into the political process for the first time and won the support of most black voters, both old and new. He is uniquely influential. The question he now has to face is whether be will lead his followers on toto the mainstream. via the Democratie Party, or whether he will take them into a backwater of exclusiveness

The Cold War Olympics

The issue clearly goes beyond the claptrap of anti-Soviet rallies to the United States, and the security of its athletes. Rumors of alternative games being staged in Sofia, Bulgaria, have been circulating since November, long before this security brouhaha exploded.

We hope that the Soviets will reconsider this ill-advised move. We hope, too, that the United States doesn't exacerbate the unhappy state of affairs by priming the pump of Cold War rhetoric. The United States should try to further accommodate the Soviet complaints. - The Jakarta Post.

The hope that the U.S. boycott of the Mos-cow Olympic Games, and the successful U.S. pressure on some others to follow suit, were an aberration and that the Olympic movement would recover from the setback has been dashed by the Soviet decision to abstain from the forthcoming Olympiad at Los Angeles. It would, however, be pointless to accuse the Russians of injecting politics into sport. The association of the two has long been a fact of international life. - The Statesman (New Delhi).

1909: Lifting a Cloud on Catholicism LONDON — The House of Commons [on May 13] agreed to the second reading of the Roman Catholic Disabilities Removal Bill. An amendment for the rejection of the bill was defeated by 133 votes to 123. The measure proposes to allow Jesuits and members of other religious orders connected with the Roman Catholic Church to reside and acquire property in the United Kingdom. It also proposes to enable Roman Catholics to hold the officers of Lord Chancellor of Great Britain and Lord Lieutenant of Ireland. Another proposal is an alteration in the statutory declaration made by the Sovereign on his accession. The declaration dates from the time of Charles II and contains the statement that Roman Catholics are superstitious and idolatrous.

1934: For a Reformed Gold Standard BASEL, Switzerland - In its unique accountantship on the world's monetary developments, the directors of the Bank for International Settlements, at a meeting here [on May 14], hailed the gradual return to economic equilibrium in many countries, declared that the re-establishment of e reformed international gold standard is indispensable for universal recovery, and urged that the moment is imminent when the important currencies should return to gold bullion stability. As evidence of gold's increased prestige, it was revealed that hoardings of gold during 1933 amounted to about 3 billion Swiss francs. The bank's annual report offers the first complete summary of the year in which the United States abandoned the gold standard.

Mondale's Failure To Prevail

By William Schneider WASHINGTON — The Demo-crats do not have a candidate. That was the message of last week's split primary results, with Gary Hart winning in Ohio and Indiana and Walter Mondale winning in Maryland and North Carolina.

Mr. Mondale was supposed to ad-Mr. Mondale was supposed to administer the coup de grace to Mr. Hart's faltering campaign by sweeping all four states and wrapping up an insurmountable delegate lead. Instead, Super Tuesday II did for Mr. Hart what Super Tuesday I had done for Mr. Mondale on March 13: It fort him alive just when it looked as kept him alive just when it looked as if he was about to go under. Let the record show that, as of last Tuesday, the Republicans do have a candidate. On that day Ronald Rea-gan sewed up the Republican nomination by winning a majority of his party's delegates. And here are the Democrats, faced with an opponent who unites his own party and antagonizes Democrats to an unprecedented degree, still unable to decide who they are and what they want.

This was not supposed to happen.
Democratic leaders were all set to bury Mr. Hart. But the corpse refused to show up. "I intend to be the nominee." Mr. Hart said on Sunday.

Of course most people still expect
Mr. Mondale to be the nominee. One recent delegate count gives him 1,528 votes, which is 49 percent of the delegates chosen so far and 439 short of the majority needed for the nomina-tion. Mr. Hart has 887 delegates and Jesse Jackson has 291. But in order to guarantee a first-ballot nomination Mr. Mondale will have to win an absolute majority of the delegates to be chosen to the next month. Most of the remaining primary states are in the West, which is not good territory for him.

C'mon, you guys — Gimme a hand, will ya?'

What the contest really demon-strates is that, while Mr. Mondale must be considered the favorite for the nomination, he is a perilously weak candidate. "He has yet to demonstrate that he represents more than 50 percent of the party," says Mr. Hart, who is right ebout this.

Mr. Hart is not e bad dream that will go away. His attacks on Mr. Mondale have stock. Whatever you may say about New England and Florida, there happen to be real Democrats in Ohio, and Mr. Mondale did not turn them on - or out.

Can Mr. Mondale be stopped? Mr. Hart and Mr. Jackson would have to form a stop-Mondale coalition and prevent the uncommitted delegates, who will probably number about 600 after the primaries are over, from jumping on the Mondale bandwagon. Uncommitted delegates always end up voting for somebody, and Mr. Mondale needs only a small proportion of them to put him over the top.

While some are issue activists — nuclear freeze enthusiasts, for example - others are professional politicians who have a strong interest in being on the winning side. If Mr. Mondale looks as if he will be the litical ambitions of their own will not want to hold out against him. Mr. Hart's potentially most com-pelling argument is that Mr. Mondale cannot win in November. It is true that Mr. Hart gets more support from independents and Re-publicans than Mr. Mondale does. But can it be demonstrated that he would defeat Mr. Reagan? Not in any current polls. Mr. Reagan: 140th any right now that he defeats both men by substantial margins — and Mr. Jackson by a landshide.

In a choice between "a known loser" and "an unknown loser," the par-ty is likely to settle for Mr. Mondale. A recent Gallup Poli suggests that there is only one way out of this dilemma. It shows that, while Mr. Mondale loses to Mr. Reagan by 8 points and Mr. Hart loses by 3, a Mondale-Hart ticket comes out even against a Reagan-Bush ticket. So Mr. ondale's best chance may be to heal the party's wounds by putting Mr. Hart on the ticket as vice president.

Can that happen?
The fact is that Mr. Hart has only one real issue in his campaign, and that is antipathy toward Mr. Mon-dale's politics — "special interests," "the failed policies of the past." Mr.

Hart wins only by mobilizing anti-Mondale feeling, which is strong among young voters, independents, New Politics liberals and anti-labor conservatives. He did exactly that in Ohio and Indiana, where he campaigned extensively and aggressively against Mr. Mondale. Where he did not campaign very hard, in Maryland and North Carolina, he lost. Mr. Mondale is an interest politician. He will try to find out what Mr. Hart's and Mr. Jackson's interests are and negotiate with them. But Mr. Hart's and Mr. Jackson's principal interest is to stop Mr. Mondale, and that is something he can hardly nego-tiate. Mr. Hart and Mr. Jackson are issue politicians, and they reject Mr. Mondale's (and the Democratic Party's) traditional way of doing busi-ness — with the economy and de-fense in Mr. Hart's case, with blacks in Mr. Iackson's case. It will be very difficult to buy them off. In the short run, the prospects for Democratic unity do not look good. None of the candidates can see very far beyond June 5. Sooner or later, however, Mr. Hart and Mr. Jackson will realize that it is not in their interest to sabotage the Democratic ticket,

A Booby Prize for Hart After a Surprising Lapse

WASHINGTON - On the aswill figure prominently in the U.S. presidential campaign this fall, Warren Christopher, who was Jimmy Carter's undersecretary of state, raises a plaintive question (IHT, May 8): "Are we destined to endure a dialogue of distraction, aimed at the lowest common denominator and the highest common vulgarity?" In a word, yes, if the dialogue to date, just between the Democratic contenders, is a reasonable test. As distractions, it is hard to beat the issues of who was first in favor of a nuclear freeze, or who would be first to move the U.S. Embassy from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem.

But first prize for vulgarity, so far, is to be Gary Hart's attack on Walter Mondale for his supposed role in those days of shame for the United States in the Iranian hostage crisis." The short-lived appearance of this issue to 1984 campaigning illustrates Mr. Christopher's point.

There are lessons to be learned from the hostage crisis, lessons about U.S. power that are worth debating in the context of current foreign policy issues. Ironically, nobody understands them - or used to understand them — better than Gary Hart.

Recognizing that he had gone much too far (but without acknowledging it), Mr. Hart backed down a few days later. He said that when he called his own party's last adminis-tration "weak" and "inept" in those days of "shame," he was only talking in the context of our need to reform our military institutions and moderuize our conventional forces." He had supported the ill-fated rescue mission and all he meant was that "we needed different kinds of equipment and we needed training" for such missions.

In fact, two years earlier the Carter so-called Delta Force to deal with terrorists and hostage-takings. It had created an airlift capability that it had reason to hope would fit almost any foresecable need. By Philip Geyelin But Mr. Hart is right: There was then, and there remains, plenty of room for improving counterterrorist techniques. Yet there is also no guarantee of success in these matters which raises the larger question of how a democracy deals with adversi-ty. In the heat of the campaign, Mr. Hart has shown us the wrong way. The irony is that, at the time, he was exhibiting the right way, judging by statements provided by his office-when I asked about Mr. Hart's recent statement that "Carter-Mondale" was producing "an America held bos-. on Nov. 8, 1979, four days after the U.S. Embassy in Tehran was seized, Mr. Hart proposed a 10-percent cutback in U.S. energy consumption to send a message to Iran that the United States will not be subject to blackmail." There was no mention of military measures.

He said he had discussed the situation with - guess who? - Vice President Mondale, and "it is clear our government is making every diplomatie effort to secure the release of the hostages." A press release later in November offered "six ways to an-swer the ayatollah" through various fuel-conservation measures.

Other statements expressed frustration and outrage over the "insanity of the situation." But unless there is something missing in the material provided by Mr. Hart's office, the senator accepted the helplessness of the U.S. position with admirable fortitude, and issued not one word of criticism of the Carter administration's handling of the affair.

Following the release of the hostages, Mr. Hart co-sponsored a Senate resolution expressing "deep ap-preciation" for the "strenuous of the Carter administration of the Carter administration of the Jewish in helping to resolve the crisis. m not suggesting that Mr. Carter prove relations between Syria and the United States? I asked Abdel Halim Khaddam, vice president in charge of foreign affairs, He answered: "Very simply, the United States should follow an American policy in the Middle East."

The theme is the same being heard nearly everywhere in the Arab world: surprise and bitterness that the United States, a superpower, allows its policy to be dictated by Israel, It is exactly the view expressed by King Hussein, for all the sharp differences between Jordan and Syria. Here, as there, one senses not the rejection of a U.S. role but the desire for an effective one - a realization that without it there can be no regional peace. Syrian officials tell this story: Five days after Israel invaded Lebanon in June 1982, Ambassador Philip Habib flew here with a letter from President Reagan to Syria's president, Hafez al-Assad. If Syria agreed to a cease-fire, it said, Israel would start withdrawing at once — and after a pause would continue to e complete withdrawal. President Assad agreed. But the Israeli Army drove on to Beirut.

"When a head of state addresses a letter to another," Mr. Khaddam said, "this means a clear undertaking. Otherwise what is the value of [such] messages? This matter played an important part in undermining the credibility of the United States, and prompted us to be cautious in our later discussions with American

The U.S. view of that episode is different. The Reagan letter was not an undertaking, American diplomats say, but an idea being tried out. But they say the Syrian government evidently did believe it had been misled. In Lebanon today Syria is working for an effective central government. Mr. Khaddam said the new cabinet of Prime Minister Rashid Karami represented "the best opportunity for internal peace," and he thought it had "the will and totention to end the crisis." But the Syrians, with much face at stake in a Lebanese solution, know it will not be easy to overcome the encrusted antagonisms of the Lebanese communal leaders.

Syrian support for a stable, unified Lebanon is consistent with expressed American goals, but here again the deep suspicion of Israel makes mutual understanding difficult. Asked whether the United States could help in Lebanon now, Mr. Khaddam said it could "press Israel to withdraw, and to stop encouraging some Lebanese parties to continue non, the security and interests of the with the game of the civil war." The Arab world, and the Arab commitlatter phrase apparently referred to Israel's contacts with extreme right-wing elements in the Christian Phaments of Lebanon. On the Iran-Iraq war, Mr. Khad-dam said Syria had warned from the beginning that the war would be "destructive to both Iran and Iraq, and harmful to the region." In his words there may even have been a hint, a nuance of changed Syrian percep-tion. Asked whether Syria continued to support Iran, he said that support was linked to longstanding differ-ences with the Saddam Hussein goverument in Iraq. Then he reiterated that Syria "denounced the war." There are in fact good reasons for President Assad to fear an actual victory by Iran, as opposed to the bleeding of Iraq. Par from favoring Islamic fundamentalism, he has ruthlessly

The Reagan administration has often denounced Syria as a Soviet pawn. No Western diplomat I met here believes that. The relationship with the Soviet Union is no more than a cohabitation of convenience," based on Syria's need for weapons to counter Israel's great power, one diplomat said.

Up close, other views of Syria also turn out to be too simple. Mr. Assad's iron control has rested on the military. Yet people say he has relied also on bourgeois support; one spoke of "the merchant-military complex." What caused the unprecedented morning after Election Day.

1. The Bumpers decision. That put Humpty Dumpty together again. Mr. Mondale realized that Mr. Hart had made himself anathema to labor, and that a Mondale-Hart ticket could easily be attacked as hypocritical. How to attract the new idea liberals without alienating the South or the AFL-CIO? Answer: an attractive, littleknown liberal, Senator Dale Bumpers Arkansas.

2. The gender-gap ambush. Never to presidential history have we seen such a difference in the voting behavior of men and women. Conservative women deserted Mr. Reagan in droves - partly because of disagree-ment on abortion and ERA, mainly because of fear of war and the conviction that Mr. Reagan did not understand working women's needs.

3. That minor stumble. Some say it was only the nosebleed, others point to the bad cold, but the age-and-health issue was suddenly injected into the campaign.

4. The absence of an escape hatch In 1980, Democrats who disdained finniny Carter but distrusted Mr. Reagan had a way of demonstrating their independence by voting for John Anderson. This year, that crowd went, two out of three, for Mondale-Bumpers (mainly for Mr. Bumpers).

5. Wall Street's black September. The steady upticking of the interest-rate clock combined with a sudden surge of inflation; that left the administration anable to pass the buck to the Fed's tight-money policy. Aggravated by the expectation of a Reagan victory and a new recession in 1985, investors started dumping, leading to what Treasury Secretary another protracted advance," and what the economist Martin Feldstein called simply "the Crash."

6. The straggle-in of the blue-collar defectors. To win in the industrial states, Mr. Reagan had to keep twothirds of the blue-collar workers who voted against Mr. Carter in 1980. Labor delivered for Mr. Mondale in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and Mr.

Donald Regan called a "brief period

7. The normalization of the Jewish voter. In 1980, many supporters of incipient betrayal from a secondterm Carter and turned to Mr. Reagan. 8. The underdog's victory in debate. In the three debates of 1984, Mr. Resgan did not do as well as widely expected. His opponent, always respectful, seemed to humor him: When Mr. Reagan twisted a fact, Mr. Mondale's "there you go again" was especially effective. As usual, the conventional wisdom of last May did not hold up in several areas. The increased registration of blacks did not win the South for the Democrats because it was largely offset by backlash and the increased effectiveness of the pro-Reagan evangelicals. The hostility of the Russians was turned into a Reagan advantage by his TV spots asking, "Why does ... the Kremlin want you to vote against

The Renaissance of Italian Theater

ROME — The Italian theater is enjoying a renais-sance — at least at the box office — having attracted a younger generation that, weary of movies and television, has acquired an appetite for "live"

His "Bread and Chocolate," an ironic social study of Italian immigrants seeking employment in Switzerland, was nominated for an Oscar, and his "Forget Venice," a drama of the attempted recepture of youth-ful illusions, won much acclaim. Massimo Bontempelli, a distinguished writer who died some years ago, is about to have his plays restored to the boards after long neglect. Due to his literary prominence he was elected to the Italian Academy during Mussolim's reign and this was held against him, though neither he nor his writings had any alliance with the Fascist regime. Two of his plays, "Nostra Dea" (Our Goddess) and "Minnie la candi-da" (Candid Minnie) are now being considered for revivals and his other works have been republished.

The most treasured practicing Italian playwright remains indeputably the Neapolitan actor-author Eduardo de Filippo, the author of countless dialect comedies about the lower-middle class of his native city and rural communities. He is now 84, but he is still theatrically acrive and has just staged a revival of his 1929 play, "Chi e più felice di me" (Who's Happier Than I) which has been packing the Teatro Guillo Cesare nightly. His son Luca has replaced him in the leading role, that of a simpleton protected from discovering his wife's infidelity by his kind cronies. NYSE Prices Drop in Slow Day NEW YORK — Prices on the New York Stock Exchange, restrained by investor concerns that interest rates are going to go higher soon, lost ground Monday. But trading volume — the second slowest of the year — indicated Wall Street was not panicky.

Amex to Stimulate Trading By Doubling Index Contract Its Capital

By H.J. MAIDENBERG New York Times Service

The American Stock Exchange, in an effort to stimulate trading in its Major Market Index options, plans to double the size of the stock index contract. Traders will thus get more leverage for their premium dollar.

Index options give the investor the right to buy or sell short the value of the basket of shares at a fixed price within a specified period. The premium is the price paid for this right.

The exchange's move reflects the radical changes that have swept the index options market in the last year. When the Amex introduced its Major Market Index options on April 29, 1983, few doubted that it would be a success. After all, its underlying 20stock index, known by its ticker symbol, XMI, correlated closely to the 30-share Dow Jones industrial stock average, long the standard measure of market

But while trading in XMI options has grown steadily, it still cannot match the volume of the Chicago Board Options Exchange's Standard & Poor's 100 option. The Chicago option, which was introduced in February of last year, consists of a "home-made" abstract of 100 blue chip stocks in the S&P 500 index, which is the

'Amex XMI's biggest problem is that it doesn't have a convenient index futures to spread average followed by professional portfolio managers. The latest open interest figures, for example, show the S&P 100 options, or OEX, with 828,693 open contracts, compared with the contracts; the Amex, 29,095. "Amex's XMI is an excellent surrogate for the Dow Jones average, but its biggest problem is that it doesn't have a convenient index futures to spread against," said John M. Blin, partner in Shatkin Investment Inc., a large Chicago house that serves only

XMI's 68,394. Last Friday, the Chicago options traded 388,208

The Amex options may be just the thing for the average investor, but people with large index options positions must be able, often on a moment's notice, to lay off with comparable

The ability to spread risk may also be why the latest open interest total of the New York Futures Exchange's index options, based on the Big Board composite index, is 118,889 contracts and its volume, last Friday, 21,000 contracts. The NYFE also trades index futures on the same average.

Also, Mr. Blin noted, the Chicago's OEX index options benefit from that exchange's vast pool of market makers. "The floor traders on the CBOE may often resemble a mob of crazy people, but they do provide OEX traders with extraordinary liquidity,"

But Paul G. Stevens, executive vice president of the Amex, said that price moves, not volatility, are the chief factor in determining the soundness of an options market. "Our specialist system, the same kind that we use in our equities and stock options markets, provides traders with efficient order execution at equitable prices," he said.

The fact that the Chicago exchange handles a higher percentage of floor trades in its OEX options than does the Amex, which depends more on outside investor business, was one geason for their higher volume and open interest, Mr. Stevens said.

Joseph B. Stefanelli, Amer's options marketing chief, noted that New York is more of an investment supermarket than "People here have a much broader range of investments to choose from," he said. "This is one reason why we are thinking of doubling the size of our XMI index options."

Noting that its antomotive group swing to a profit from a loss, Fiat said it carned 214 billion lire (about $126 million) in 1983, up from carnings of 111 billion lire in 1982. Revenue rose 6.6 percent to 21.98 trillion lire last year from 20.62 trillion lire in 1982.

The company said consolidated group profit for 1983 will be not less than that of the parent company. This would represent a big in-crease from 1982 consolidated profit of 137 billion lire.

The financing plan calls for a three-part operation of bonus and rights issues that would increase the capital of Fiat SpA to about 2.02 trillion lire from 337.5 billion lire. Company officials said the proposed rights issue would be the argest offer ever made on the Mi-

Proceeds of the rights issue would go towards financing investments of 8,000 billion lire planned for the next three years, Fiat said. Company officials said Fiat would invest 6,000 billion lire in fixed assets and 2,000 billion lire in research and development. About 3,500 billion lire would be invested in the group's carmaking plants and 800 billion lire in the Iveco utility vehicle subsidiary

In a first step, capital would be doubled to 675 billion lire by doubling the nominal value of existing shares to 1,000 lire each from 500

This will be followed by a one-for-one free issue redoubling capi-tal to 1.35 trillion lire. Shareholders would be asked to subscribe a onefor-one rights issue based on the first stage of enlarged capital at a price of 1,130 lire a share. After drawing down more than 1

rillion lire from reserves to cover the increase in oominal value of the shares and the bonus issue, remaining reserves would still exceed the

Value of Dividends Divides Experts

Payout Cuts Can Prove Of Benefit to Investors

By Eric N. Berg New York Times Service

NEW YORK - Dividends may not be the stuff NEW YORK — Dividends may not be the sum of suspense novels, but so far this year they have made headlines. A reinvigorated Chrysler Corp. reinstated its quarterly payout, American Telephone & Telegraph Co. threatened to can its dividend for the first time ever, two big utilities — Long Island Lighting Co. and Public Service Co. of New Hampshire — halted their common stock dividends and General Motors Corp. surprised Wall Street by raising its quarterly payout 25

But whether dividends are good for shareholders is not altogether clear. While some old-line compamies, such as General Electric Co., have paid dividends for years, rapid-growth, high-tech concerns, such as Apple Computer Inc., often do not pay dividends at all. Nor is the meaning of dividend changes easy to decipher.

A dividend cut, for example, could be good news if a company is reinvesting funds in promising ventures. Moreover, as the economy changes to high-technology-oriented industry and as companies spend more on research and development, a trend to leaner dividends could become more pronounced. Consequently, the investing public may have to depend less on dividends for total returns.

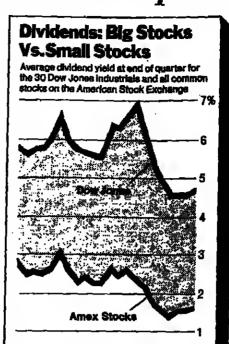

In fact, there is a growing sentiment that the role of dividends should be played down and that cash payouts, because they are taxed more highly than long-term capital gains, are a costly way to compensate shareholders.

"Why firms continue to pour out vast quantities of dividends in the face of these tax differentials is one of the great puzzles of our time," said Merton H. Miller, the Leon Carroll Marshall Professor of Finance at the University of Chicago.

For more than two decades, academicians, Wall

Sit-Ins Spread To 2 Other Citroën Plants

The sit-in began Friday at the Aulnay-sous-Bois plant of Citroen, which is a division of the Peugeot

Several violent incidents were reported Monday at the company's Nanterre plant, and the company asked riot police to clear the plant there, at Levallois and Aulnay.

Union officials led by Henri Krasucki, general secretary of the Communist-dominated General Confederation of Labor, or CGT said they were protesting Citroën's plan to fire 2,937 workers at Aul-nay as part of the division's effort to cut its 43,000-member work

In March the company had announced that 3,144 workers had

"The legitimate interests of workers concerned" also had to be protected, he added.

Complicating the talks is the fact that the French Democratic Labor Confederation, or CFDT, which is backing the sit-ins, wants to begin talks with the government for a 35-hour workweek. Actoworkers currently work a 39-hour week.

A Citroen spokesman said the company "would have difficulty surviving in three years" if the 6,000 jobs are oot cut at six of the company's plants, including Aul-

After conducting an investiga-tion, the Office of Fair Trading concluded in March that Ford was pursuing an anticompetitive practice. The office said it referred the case to the commission because it has not received an acceptable re-

Extradition of Ruiz-Mateos Viewed as Important Step By John Damton

New York Times Service

MADRID — The eyes of Jose
Maria Ruiz-Mateos, the financier who left Spain after his shaky business empire was expropriated last year by the government, stare from the cover of almost every weekly magazine here.

For months, the Spanish press has been closely following his complicated travels abroad, a story filled with declarations and denunciations and frequent disappearances and sightings from Europe to However, now that Spain has de-cided to seek the extradition of Mr.

Ruiz-Mateos from West Germany, there is a sense that the chase was nearing an end.

Mr. Ruiz-Mateos, 53, was arrested on April 25 with the help of interpol when he passed through interpol when he passed interpol immigration at the Frankfurt ar-port after stepping off a flight from the United States. He is being held in Preugesheim prison in Frank-

The former president and founder of Rumasa faces a variety of charges arising from his business dealings when he headed the holding company, which was said to be Spain's largest private enterprise. The charges include fraud, embez-zlement, falsification of documents and nonpayment of withheld taxes and social welfare benefits.

He has also been charged with insulting the head of state, King Juan Carlos L. This crime, punish able by six mooths to 12 years in ail, stemmed from magazine interviews he gave earlier this year while

According to José Luis de Vicente-Retortillo, one of Mr. Ruiz-Mateos's lawyers, this may mean that the charge will be dropped and that the financier is to stand trial only on the charges of

The following month, Mr. Ruiz-Mateos went to London, where he began a long court battle against the takeover and ignored summonses demanding court appear ances in Spain. He was formally charged in July but remained be-yond the reach of Spanish justice because Spain and Britain have no extradition treaty.

His residency permit in Britain expired earlier this year. He was able to obtain extensions but eventually was forced to leave April 18. He went to Miami, where he has business interests, and on April 24 took a plane from New York to Frankfurt. The detention order was bassy in Madrid said the order had either not been received or did not reach the appropriate authorities in time to detain the financier in the United States. It remained a mystery why Mr. Ruiz-Mateos risked going to Frankfurt, where he has husiness interests, since West Germany and Spain have an extradition treaty. His attorneys noted that he had safely visited Frankfurt only 10 days earlier, and they suggested en their client by surprise. They said they would fight extradition. An audit showed that Rumasa had accumulated a $1.7-billion deficit at the time of the takeover. So far, 17 companies, including Banco Atlantico, the largest of the 20 Rumasa banks, have been sold back to the private sector. Rumasa officials said they expect to sell back many other companies by this summer, including 17 banks, a hothree insurance companies and a champagne company.

The Euromarket Is Worried By Pending U.S. Tax Bills

down a bit. Given U.S. congressional fears about possible tax evasion, there is little doubt that U.S. Treasury bonds will remain registered obli-gations. But it is unclear how the U.S. Treasury will treat U.S. corpo-rate bonds issued to foreigners. Currently, foreign holders of U.S. corporate boods issued through Netherlands Anties fi-

The U.S. Securities Industry Association has suggested to Con-gress that this treatment be given to U.S. corporations' bonds issued directly in the Euromarket, which would dispense with the need to float such debt through the Netherland Antilles subsidiaries.

Currently, there is oo such provi sion in the House bill. "But if the Senate bill goes through, we don't expect there will be any require-

It is expected that U.S. corpora-dons will break up their bond issues into two parts, one sold as registered obligations to U.S. investernational investors as bearer obli-gations. Again under U.S. law, U.S. corporations are allowed to issue bearer bonds where beneficial owners do nor have to identify themselves as long as the interest is paid outside the United States.

"This will probably give an advantage to U.S. corporate bonds over Treasury bonds," says Jeffrey M. Schaefer, senior vice president and director of research of the U.S. Securities Industry Association. But attorneys for some banks, especially those in Switzerland, are worried that at some future date the U.S. Treasury could ask Swiss banks to disclose the beneficial wners of bearer Eurobonds issued by U.S. corporations.

"If we get repeal through Congress, the system will be no more fragile than it is today through the Netherlands Aotilies corporations," said another attorney in

Reagan Comment Seems to Soften Criticism of Fed The Associated Press

At a White House news confer-ence, Mr. Reagan also said that the tools the U.S. central bank uses to cootrol the growth in the money supply "are oot all that accurate. "It is possible for there to be for limited times an inadvertent up surge or an inadverteot decline that the Fed doesn't have anything to do with. They do as well as they can in trying to keep this projected growth," he said.

Mr. Reagan added: "I think that one of the reasons for the interest rates is still a lack of confidence out there that we do have inflatioo under control."

Asked whether he was backing Donald T. Regan's recent criocism of the Fed, the president responded. "I think that's what Secretary Regan was also trying to say."

Last week both Mr. Regan and the White House spokesman, Larry M. Speakes complained that the Fed was keeping too tight a hold on the money supply.

THE LIVES OF RILEY CHANCE

By Robert Bausch, 292 pp. $14.95. St. Martin's, 175 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10010.

Reviewed by Joseph McLellan

I T took three lifetimes for Riley Chance to learn his lesson. Then be blew it. Robert Bausch's second novel opens in late 1980 with Chance being interrogated on a murder charge. It is absurd, of course — one of the novel's themes is absurdity. Biley Chance is not a supplied to the second themes is absurdity. Riley Chance is not a murderer, though Kenny Ezra was, back around the turn of the century in Wilkes-Barre. Chance can remember Kenny Ezra's life be-Chance can remember Kenny Ezra's he because he lived it in a previous incarnation. In between being Kenny Ezra of Pennsylvania and Riley Chance of Illinois, this wandering soul was also Jack Pitt, who lived in the District from the late 1920s to the early 1940s. Perhaps he is fortunate in being able to remem-ber previous incarnations, but he doesn't think so. The odds are that his memories will put him in a mental hospital. "The Lives of Riley Chance" is not exactly a novel about remcarnation; rather, reincarna-tion is a device used by the author to explore the problems of evil, death and human rela-tionships. This novel asks the question: How can we get through life while inflicting minimal damage? Its answer is inconclusive, but it sug-gests that we should try to be as kind as we can to one another — though such efforts are likely to be misunderstood. The book is not worth reading for that message alone, but it is worth-while for the richly elaborate package in which the message is embodied.

Chance's three lives are chronicled in three weeks of interrogation (actually monologues) taken down in 1980. So far, in the lives he taken down in 1980. So far, in the lives he remembers, Riley Chance has not managed to get past his 20s. He has always been someone who "wanted to fix things for everybody." In pursuit of that goal, he has become a murderer, a thief and a liar without getting into much trouble, except in his own conscience. The trouble begins, and he becomes a fugitive from justice, when the third war of his three incarnajustice, when the third war of his three incarnations comes up — Vietnam — and he decides that he doesn't want to be a soldier again.

The first time around, Kenny Ezra finds the answer to his problems (an unsatisfactory answer) in violence. It is a violent time; workers are organizing into unions and meeting armed resistance. Kenny's violence is not part of the class struggle, however, but personal — he kills a man who molested his sister. The next time, the background is the Depression, and Jack Pitt resorts to deception and subterfuge (robbing the poor box in his local church) to help an unemployed neighbor. His downfall comes (although he doesn't really understand this) when he becomes involved in violence to help a friend — the mode of behavior worked out in his previous existence. He starts a barroom brawl and ends up paralyzed from the neck down. This segment concludes with his development of an ingenious (and ghastly) scheme for committing suicide in a hospital bed when he can move nothing but his head.

The shird life which continues to the end of

The third life, which continues to the end of the book, develops the motif of noninvolve-ment. Riley Chance becomes aware of his pre-vious existences for the first time and concindes that kindness may be "the most useless of all human behavior." He tells his father (the third in a series of fathers) that "there isn't any such thing as rightness," and tries to build a life devoid of meaningful human contacts. An act of kindness is his downfall. More specifically, he runs into trouble in this incarnation because be is trying once again to rectify an unresolved problem from his last incarnation. But this time it doesn't matter, he has come to realize, through three incarnations, that evil is often rewarded in this world, goodness is often misunderstood and punished — or perhaps that "good" and "evil" are simply noises that we make about a much more complex reality. "Nobody loses all the time" are the book's final, mutedly optimistic words.

If Robert Bansch has set out to write a 20thcentury response to Voltaire's "Candide," he has done a fair job of it. He manages a complex set of symbols, incidents, characters and motifs in a tightly organized form, imposing coher-ence on a wealth of material that could easily become chaotic. His book has a special resonance that continues in the mind long after you finish the final page. It may be the resonance of the 20th century — a chronicle of what has happened to the human soul in this dark and turbulent time.

Fuel Economy Squeezes Renault's Racing Team

PARIS - The Renault Formula One racing team may drop ont of the 1984 World Championship before the British grand prix in July if not he resolved. Renault's team director. Gérard Larrousse, said Monday.

Larrousse said Renault would try to resolve its over-consumption of fuel while competing in the next five races, but if no solution is found, "then we will have to start questioning our participation. "Seriously, I can foresee a pause," he said.

Larrousse told L'Equipe, a Parisbased sports newspaper, that poor fuel economy in the cars had forced driver Patrick Tambay to abandon his first two grand prix races this season - in Brazil and South Africa - and that the team had been forced to order driver Derek Warwick to slow down at the San Marino race May 6 to save fuel.

"We can't ask our drivers to slow down after a few laps so we will be ready to rally at the end. That's not racing," Larrousse said.

There is no way were going to race like we did at Imola (the San Marino grand prix), where I told Warwick to slow down after 10 laps. That is punishing the drivers and the whole team and it's bad publicity for us," he said.

Warwick finished second at Imola, despite slowing down, and is carrently second in World Championship standings with 13 points, well behind leader Alain Prost with 24. Tambay has managed only a single point this season after four Larrousse said Renault lagged behind its opponents in fuel con-sumption technology but rejected the immediate solution of cutting the car's power to save fuel. He said its fuel consumption problems can-the team had begun a "large development program" to solve the problem before the British grand prix on July 22. He said three of the races preceding the British event - Monte Carlo, Detroit and Dallas -- were short courses where fuel consumption would not be a factor. The second half of the season with longer courses, would be diffi-cult to compete in if the fuel problem persisted, he said.

Olympics in El Salvador?

Washington — The UnitMedals if they keep swimming in our hemisphere." problem. It doesn't want the Rusiens in El Salvador, but it does want them in Los Angeles.

The Soviets, according to President Reagan, are running all over Central America, but they don't want to send one weight lifter to the Olympics.

The State Department is now working day and night to reverse

"What do you plan to do about the problem?" I asked one of the American diplomats working on the impasse.
"We're in touch with Mos-Buchwald cow now and our message to them is that we have no objection to them testing us in Los Angeles, but we take a serious view of them competing with us in Central America."

Radcliffe's Identity Crisis at Harvard

By Fox Butterfield New York Times Service

C AMBRIDGE, Massachusetts — Ask Monica Gorman, a freshman from Los Angeles, or Rosemarie Sabatino, a senior from West Virginia, where they go to college, and they answer, Harvard.

They live in Harvard housing, go to Harvard classes and will receive Harvard degrees.
But technically they are students at Radcliffe College, whose president and trustees insist Radcliffe remains independent despite two decades of gradual integregation with Harvard University.

The meshing of the two schools has been so effective that the proportion of male and female students is almost equal in this year's freshman class, even though Harvard once had an effective quota of four student men for every woman.

But Radcliffe's increasing affiliation with

Harvard poses two questions. Is Radcliffe still a true college, an independent institution dedicated to women's education, or does it exist in name only?

The women who run Raddliffe, Matina S.

Horner, the president, and the deans and trustees, say the school is more vital than ever. They cite a new counseling program for undergraduates, the Schlesinger Library on the History of Women and the Bunting Institute to promote research by women.

A Radcliffe graduate on Harvard's faculty offered a blunter assessment: "The library and the institute are wonderful, but the rest of Radcliffe is now a Harvard coeducational institution. It's gone.

There is no need, she contended, for Radcliffe to have a president, deans and a board of trustees. Harvard does not eliminate those positions because it is afraid of being charged with sexism, the professor said, and besides, she added, the Radcliffe name is still important for fund-raising.

The integration of the two schools took place through a series of steps: In 1963, for the first time, Harvard degrees were awarded to Radcliffe students; in 1971, all housing became coeducational; in 1975, a joint admissions program was adopted, and in 1977, the schools signed an overall accord that codified the changes

Raddliffe's new role has created an identity problem for many female undergraduates who go through four years at Harvard with-out participating in Radcliffe programs or "It almost doesn't exist for me, it's as if I go to Harvard," said Gorman. "I know Rad-cliffe is there and it has things I could get involved in, but it's just like another extracur-

Confusion over Radcliffe's role is not new. Confusion over Raddiffe's role is not new. Ever since it was founded in 1879 as the Harvard "Annex" to educate "properly qualified young women," its identity has been debated. Lucy Paton, an 1892 graduate, later recalled that "one of the burning questions of the day was that of the relationship of Harvard to the Annex."

But today, Horner asserts: "While some people say we're not a traditional college, I say we are. We just happen to do things in an usual way."

Horner, a psychologist and a Bryn Mawr graduate, says it is important to remember that Radcliffe never had its own faculty. From the beginning its classes were taught by Harvard professors, who until World War II were paid extra for teaching Radcliffe classes. It is also significant, Horner says, that under the 1977 agreement female students are technically admitted to Radcliffe, or as a Radcliffe broken were to Wilcome.

Radcliffe brochure puts it, "Women under-graduates are admitted to and enrolled in Radcliffe College and thereby also enrolled in Harvard College." She says it does not bother her that Radcliffe students say they go to Harvard. "It's what we beat our heads against the wall for years to achieve," Horner said, referring to the fact that Radcliffe students now have full access to Harvard's facilities. Horner and other Radcliffe officials say they are particularly proud of the Schlesin Library and the Bunting Institute. The li-brary, with 25,000 books and 550 manuscript collections, is the largest in the world devoted entirely to women's history, according to Patricia King, its director. Among its holdings are the papers of Susan B. Anthony, Julia Child and Betty Friedan.

The Bunting Institute, founded in 1960, now offers fellowships to 43 female scholars.

scientists, artists and writers a year. "It's a wonderful place, with its all-female environment tremendously supportive," said Gillian Hart, an assistant professor of economics at Boston University who is doing research this year on agrarian problems in Indonesia.

But only about 10 percent of the library's 5,000 users last year were Raddiffe under-graduates, and the fellows at the institute have little to do with students. Moreover, only about one out of eight Radcliffe students actively participate in the college's undergraduate programs, according to Philippa

Bovet, the associate dean.

Perhaps Radcliffe's greatest success in its integregation with Harvard, in the view of Radcliffe officials, has been the sharp rise in the number of female students. In 1973, before the joint admissions policy ended sex-based quotas, there were 1,452 undergraduate women and 4,686 undergraduate men. This year there are 2,677 women and 3,860 men, with an even narrower difference in the
